

SCENE TWO

A castle hallway. Evening.

KING: (rising from his chair) The crown weighs heavier than I thought it would. [He crosses to the window.]

KING: My father wore it thirty years and never once complained. I have worn it thirty days and already my neck aches.

(A long pause. Thunder in the distance.)

KING: Perhaps it is not the crown that is heavy.
Perhaps it is what I have done to keep it.

[Exit KING, slowly.]
